Republican Congressional District Convention.
FIRST DISTRICT.
A Republican Convention of the First Congressional District of the State of Wisconsin, composed of the counties of Kenosha, Racine, Walworth, Rock and Jefferson, is hereby called to meet at the village of Geneva, in Walworth county, on the 16th day of August, 1882, at 12 o'clock noon of that day, to nominate a candidate for Congress for the District for the next ensuing two years. Each Senate and Assembly District will be entitled to two delegates in the convention.

JOHN R. BENNETT,
D. B. BARNES,
E. ENOS,
T. G. FISH,
H. S. THOMP,
Committee.

Dated July 12th, 1882.

CONGRESSIONAL CONVENTION.
The committee of the First Congressional district has called a convention for the 16th day of August to be held at the village of Geneva, in Walworth county. This is a little more than two weeks later than the convention of 1880 which was then held on the 28th of July. It was thought best to name a later date than two years ago to enable the candidates, who are now in Congress, to reach home and give the field a survey before the convention met. It is not likely that there will be any harmony in the convention, but in justice both to Mr. Caswell and Mr. Williams it was thought best to wait till Congress adjourned before holding the convention. There are exceedingly friendly relations existing between these gentlemen, and the result at the convention will in nowise cause an embittered feeling.

THE MEANING OF THE WAR IN THE EAST.

The war which began in Egypt on Tuesday morning by the bombardment of the city of Alexandria, will not be of long duration. But it is an important war, not only to England who began the attack on Tuesday, but to all Europe, and even America, whose sympathies will naturally be on the side of England in the contest, will watch the struggle with more than ordinary interest.

The cause of the trouble is the control of the Suez Canal. Although Egypt proper has a population of little more than 5,000,000, and has only 5,500 square miles of cultivated land, its commerce amounts to $150,000,000, and it commands the vastly more important commerce of the canal. To England, the protection of the Suez from Egyptian and Turkish interference has become a national necessity. It will be remembered that the great work of uniting the waters of the Mediterranean and Red Sea was completed in 1869. Through the skill and statesmanship of Lord Beaconsfield, the then English premier, the government of Great Britain became the owner, by purchase, of nearly 200,000 of the 400,000 shares of the Suez Canal stock, paying the Khedive of Egypt the sum of $20,400,000 therefor. At first it was not a paying investment. In 1870, but 486 vessels went through the canal, and the receipts were not quite $2,000,000. But in 1881, the number of vessels which passed through the canal was 3,727, and the earnings were $10,551,800, and 82 per cent of the traffic belonged to England. From this it will be seen that England has an important interest in the canal, holding fully one-half of the bonds, and beside that the English capitalists have invested very largely in Egyptian and Turkish promises to pay, and to protect those is the duty of the British government.

Then again, years ago, Egypt borrowed large sums of money from England and France, and since then has paid no part of the principal. Then "to satisfy and secure the English and French bondholders, Egypt agreed to allow the representatives of these two nations a share of control in the internal administration of her affairs. And accordingly two resident Consuls took up their permanent abode at the Egyptian court and palace, and virtually exercised a good deal of power over all the public movements of the Khedive. Arabi saw this, and entered upon a crusade to overthrow it, and the present war is the result." Of course Arabi undertook also to prevent English commerce from going through the canal, and this hastened the bombardment of Alexandria.

It is said that the war could be speedily stopped by the intervention of the Sultan of Turkey who has an immense revenue from Egypt, but he evidently doesn't want any war in his lot and portion this time, and will let Arabi fight it out to suit himself. When Arabi makes up his mind to respect the stipulation entered into between England and Egypt in regard to the British capitalists in Alexandria, and does not attempt to interfere with British commerce on that great highway of nations, the Suez Canal—the war will end.

It is said that in the operation of the canal, it cannot be used without fresh water. It runs through a sandy waste and there is no fresh water within 100 miles on one side and 500 on the other. "The fresh water with which Port Said, Ismailia and Suez, the three stations along the canal, are supplied, comes from the Nile through a canal at Boulak, near Cairo. Should Arabi shut off this supply, the canal would be useless and great distress ensue. As he is in possession of Cairo, the people along the canal are at his mercy."

THE BOMBARDMENT.

Special to the Gazette.
ALEXANDRIA, July 12, 11:40 a. m.—The Inflexible and Temeraire opened fire this morning on Monrovia Fort, which, during the night, had been repaired. The first three shots greatly damaged her batteries. Signal has been just given to cease firing. The Achilles is approaching the fleet with a flag of truce.

1:30 p. m.—A white flag is also displayed from the town. A party from the Inflexible which landed to destroy Fort Meks, burst three, and spiked six guns. The wounded include Lieutenant Jackson, severely; Lieutenant Davis, and Midshipman Lumsden.

JUSTIFIABLE.

PARIS, July 11.—A dispatch from Vienna says it is admitted in government circles, that England is perfectly justified in her vigorous action against Arabi Pasha's attitude of provocation; and so long as England pursues this line of conduct she will meet with no opposition from the powers.

THE EGYPTIAN ARMY.

WASHINGTON, July 11.—The Egyptian army was organized by American officers and no doubt owes its efficiency, if it has any, to them. The New York Herald publishes to-day a very interesting account of the experience of these American officers in Egypt. They went to Egypt in 1867, nearly all broken in fortune and filled with high hopes in their employment. It was through General Thad. P. Mott, son of Dr. Valentine Mott, who had made his way to Constantinople and there married a Greek lady, that these gentlemen were induced to enter the services of the Khedive. General Mott served in Italy, and afterward rose to the rank of Brigadier General in the Federal army during the late civil war. The best known of these Americans was General Charles P. Stone. It was not long before the American officers began to feel hostile pressure from two quarters—one from the American Consul General, Colonel C. B. Butler, and from the British Indian. There followed some personal encounters and general bickering, disagreeable to all concerned, and as a body among the Christian colonies of those two cities these two gentlemen soon lost any collective standing. Individually, however, the larger proportion being from the Confederate army, and they have nearly all led very adventurous careers, both before and after leaving the Egyptian service.

It is hardly probable that any of the American officers will participate in the struggle with the exception of General Stone, and it is extremely doubtful if he will be permitted to retain any important command if a religious war grows out of the present situation. Few of the officers now live to see the fruit of their labors. There is a large number of Americans and officers everywhere who will watch the result of the fighting as an evidence of what our military task-masters can do with African material.

REGUGEES AT MILWAUKEE

MILWAUKEE, July 11.—About twenty of the Russian refugees who have been on the hands of the charitable people of this city for the past few days, left for various parts of the interior of the State last evening, and it is probable that nearly all will be gone before the end of the week. Through the efforts of the citizens having them in charge, good homes have been provided for many of them. Oshkosh, Green Bay, Fond du Lac, and other cities, and reports from those who have gone to work show that they are giving good satisfaction as laborers. Yesterday afternoon the Jewish rite of circumcision was conferred upon the young child of one of the Jewish ladies. The ceremony was conducted by Rabbi Moses, of Temple Emanuel, who was assisted by Dr. Fish.

STATE NOTES.

MADISON, July 11.—The First Regiment of Wisconsin National Guards will go into camp at Racine, July 26 to Aug. 1, inclusive. The Third Battalion will camp at Devil's Lake, August 14th to 18th inclusive.

The State Board of Supervision of Charitable and Penal Institutions has been in session here to-day. The contract work for the next five years of the State prison at Waupun has been let to M. D. Wells & Co., of Chicago, at 50 cents per head, which is 25 per cent higher than the rate stipulated in the contract for the five years past.

There are now 459 patients and ninety-eight officers and employees in the State Insane Hospital at Madison. At the Northern Insane Hospital at Oshkosh there are 532 patients and ninety-nine officers and employees.

BURGLARS.

RACINE, Wis., July 11.—Burglars entered the home of Harry Forester while absent at a circus and robbed him of money and valuable jewelry. Miss Jady Cowles, of Baltimore, who was visiting Mrs. Forester, lost a valuable diamond cross, heavy gold bracelets, brilliant earrings, and other valuable jewelry amounting to several hundreds of dollars. It is supposed that a dozen other places have been gone through, as there was an extremely hard crowd following Batchelor & Dorris' Circus. The burglars are supposed to have gone to Milwaukee to-night.

SUICIDE AT 93.

CLEVELAND, O., July 12.—Silas Mead, aged 93, while laboring under a fit of insanity, cut his throat with a razor, and died soon after at his home in East Trumbull, a small hamlet south of Geneva, O. After shaving himself, he called the attention of the family, and in their presence committed the fatal act. Trouble about some legal business weighed on his mind. He was a soldier in the war of 1812, and received a pension.

THE SECOND CITY.

A Visit to Its Leading Manufacturing Establishment—The Wonder of West.

RACINE, July 10.—A visit to this city has given us an opportunity to pay our respects to the works of the J. I. Case threshing machine company, which is the largest and the most successful establishment of the kind in all the West. Through the kindness of Frank K. Bull, secretary of the company, we were shown through the immense works, which cover fifteen acres of ground and the area is closely covered with buildings all used by this company in the manufacture of threshing machines, horse powers, boilers and engines for threshing purposes, and are shipped to all parts of the world. They employ 750 men, and the pay roll amounts to $28,000 a month. They manufacture two steam engines per day, and eight threshers complete, and 1,200 horse powers and 350 headers a year, the latter being exclusively made for the California trade. The motive power which puts in operation the complex, extensive, and powerful machinery of these works, is derived from four great engines with a combined capacity of 300 horse power. The shipping season usually commences about April 1, and continues increasing each week until July 1.

The company has just completed a new machine shop which is used for a new departure—that of manufacturing portable saw mills. They have put in the latest and the best machinery for that purpose in their new building. The manufacture of these mills is an important industry and they find ready sale in the lumber country. The engine required for one of these saw mills, range in power from 8 to 30 horse, and will saw from 5,000 to 10,000 feet per day.

This company was formed in 1842, and its career has been one of continued success. It had a small beginning at first, commencing with the manufacturing of the tread power threshing machine, but to-day it commands more capital and turns out more machines and engines than any other similar establishment in the West. The officers of the company are Jerome I. Case—president—founder of the works; Stephen Bull, vice president; M. B. Erskine, superintendent; Robert H. Baker, treasurer; and Frank K. Bull, secretary.

THE SEAT OF WAR.

The original city of Alexandria was founded by Alexandria the Great, 332 B. C. It had a circumference fifteen miles and 50 B. C. contained a population of 300,000 freemen and about an equal number of slaves. Lake Mareotis was on its south and the Mediterranean on the north, with the Neropolis on the west and the Hippodrome on the south. In 80 B. C. Ptolemy Alexander bequeathed the city to the Romans but owing to civil disturbances in the empire into which Alexandria was drawn, it was 30 B. C. before a prefect appointed by the Roman Emperor, in which condition it continued until 136 A. D., when Severus restored it to a municipality. It regained its old prosperity, until 255 A. D., when Emperor Caracalla ordered the murder of all youths capable of bearing arms, an order which resulted in a general massacre of the inhabitants. This disaster was soon overcome, however, and Alexandria again flourished as the first city in the world, under from the Roman capital itself. A number of insurrections, reduced its importance, and in 616 was taken by the Persians, and again in 640 by the Arabs, after a siege of fourteen months. Arma, the Arabian commander, wrote the Caliph Omar that he had taken a city containing 4000 palaces, 4000 baths, 12,000 dealers in fresh oil, 12,000 gardeners and 40,000 Jews who pay tribute and 400 theaters. It was at this time that John, the grammarian and philosopher, requested the Arabian commander for the Royal Library. The matter was submitted to Omar, who ordered it destroyed on the ground that if the books contained anything contrary to the Koran they ought to be put out of the way, and if they did not they were useless, as the Koran contained all necessary truths. For six months thereafter the valuable books were used for fuel for the public baths until the whole were destroyed. The city was shortly after taken by the Greeks, but soon regained by the Arabians. Constantine the Great, taking advantage of the revolt among the inhabitants over the removal of Amra, the Governor, captured the city. The Caliph, however, restored Amra to power, with an army drove the Greeks with the walls, and it was not until the city was nearly destroyed that it surrendered. From this time forward the place declined until its ruin was completed in 969 by the founding of Cairo, and the discovery of the route to the east by the Cape of Good Hope in 1497 ruined its commerce, and it sank out of sight until the beginning of the present century. Its site in the meantime has been changed. The new city stands partly on what was the island of Pharos, now a peninsula, but mostly on the isthmus by which it is connected with the main land. The ancient city was on the mainland adjacent to the modern town. It was formerly surrounded by a strong wall, but this has gone to by a strong wall, but this has gone to by improvements. In the Turkish quarter the city is irregular and dirty, and its general appearance as a whole is anything but enviable. The principal hotels and shops are in a great square, the center of which is planted with trees and provided with seats. The city is indebted for its prosperity to the advantage of its position for trade. This position was lost by the discovery of the Cape of Good Hope route to the East, and its population dropped down to 600,000 from 1,000,000. It obtained a new start in 1859 by the construction of the Suez Canal, and at a cost of $1,500,000, and it became the center of steam navigation and the principal station on the overland route to India. In 1859 a railroad was built between Alexandria and Cairo, and extended to Suez and the cotton districts of the Delta. Alexandria has two ports, one in the east and the other on the west. The population is of mixed character, numbering in 1871 219,092 of whom 53,926 were foreigners.

A Singular Gypsy Tribe.

A wandering tribe, which has caused some curiosity in Madras, may possibly be identified with a singular class of Gypsies known by the name of Mayadda, who visited Lahore in 1863, and a curious and interesting account of whom is published in a memorandum written by Dr. Leitner, and printed by the Punjab Government. In that year a large crowd of them arrived on foot and in carts from Afghanistan, and encamped for some little time in this place. They spoke a peculiar jargon among themselves, though when within earshot of Europeans and Indians they spoke Persian. At first, it seems, there was a difficulty in identifying even their place of abode, but officers from various parts of India affirmed that the noisy and quarrelsome strangers were in the way of passing periodically between this country and Central Asia, and that they had an unpleasant habit of looting villages on their route. Mayadda were always armed on reaching the Indian frontier, a fact for which they accounted by saying that they were Shiash, whom, as every one knows, their Sunni co-religionists sometimes sell as slaves. "When," says Dr. Leitner, "I visited their encampment their frantic gesticulations and the hurling of children by one woman to another in order to emphasize her rage, reminded me of a scene recorded in my account of the Gypsies of Turkey when a case was decided in favor of that side in a tribunal contention which could dance most obscenely and use the strongest expressions while advocating their own cause." Others of the same tribe appear to have visited Lahore in 1870. Their Central Asiatic home is said to be Khorasan, and it seems that their journey from one country to the other and back extends over many years. A partial vocabulary of the dialect of thieves' language used by the Mayadda has, we believe, been compiled by Dr. Leitner.—Civil and Military Gazette.
